BULLETIN OF THE MONTH

Soybeans in family meals
Home and Garden Bulletin No. 208

This new bulletin describes the nutritive value of soybeans in nine different forms. Soybeans can make a valuable addition to the foods we eat. They're used in main dishes, vegetables, salads, breads, soups, desserts, sauces, and snacks. A number of menu suggestions are included.

HOME AND GARDEN BULLETINS

Family fare . . . a guide to good nutrition. (G 1) 91 p. $1.00.

Whether you are just learning the skills of food management and good cooking or are an experienced hand in the kitchen, this booklet can serve you well. This revision combines good eating and good nutrition. It packs the results of years of food and nutrition research into a ready handbook for everyday use, then translates this knowledge into taste-tested recipes and well-balanced meals.

How to make jellies, jams, and preserves at home. (G 56) 34 p. 40¢.

This bulletin gives general procedures for making various kinds of jellies, jams, and conserves, with and without added pectin. It also includes recipes for marmalades and preserves made with no added pectin. This revision updates the sections on equipment and containers, making and storing jellied fruit products, packing, and sealing.

Selecting shrubs for shady areas. (G 142) 16 p. 30¢.

This revised bulletin describes and illustrates 30 shrubs that can be grown in shady areas throughout the United States. It includes information on the use, shade requirements, and soil and moisture requirements of the shrubs, and on their hardiness in different zones.

How to buy meat for your freezer. (G 166) 27 p. 35¢.

Consumers have three alternatives in buying meat for their freezer: buying a whole carcass, side, or quarter; buying wholesale cuts; or buying retail cuts. The purpose of this slightly revised bulletin is to help the consumer compare the costs under the alternatives and also to point out a number
